INTERACTIVITY FOUNDATION, WESLEYAN COLLEGE ANNOUNCE WISE-IF CLASSROOM INITIATIVE

Macon, GA— January 2012 — The nonprofit Interactivity Foundation (IF) and Wesleyan College have announced a two-year initiative to incorporate interactive, student-centered discussion processes into first-year seminar courses.

The two organizations will collaborate to reimagine the Wesleyan Integrated Seminar (WISE), a first-year course required of all Wesleyan students, using ideas and techniques from IF.

“We believe the program could have a significant impact on student success, retention, and the college as a whole,” said IF Vice President Jeff Prudhomme, Ph.D. “This could become a model for other schools to replicate.”

Since 2006, IF has been training and supporting faculty in the United States and abroad to use its innovative small-group discussion process. The Wesleyan initiative represents the first time IF has introduced the method to students university-wide. The courses, which will be led by professors from across disciplines, will begin later this year and extend to 2013.

“Our WISE courses are the foundation of a Wesleyan education,” said Matthew R. Martin, Ph.D., an English professor and co-director of the WISE-IF initiative. “We’re thankful to IF for the energy, ideas, and resources they’re contributing to keep Wesleyan a place where engaged, inquisitive, and articulate women can come to learn and grow.”

Vice President of Academic Affairs and Dean of the College Vivia Fowler called the Wesleyan-IF partnership exciting and forward-thinking. “We want to both open people’s minds to the possibilities of the world around us and help them develop their voices in making those possibilities a reality.”
